ACADEMIC PROJECT

Autism Care

Autism Care, a web application developed using Python Django and MySQL, I contributed to its creation and deployment. My role involved implementing key features and integrating machine learning algorithms for autism prediction. This experience allowed me to enhance my skills in software development, particularly in Python and web frameworks, while gaining insights into the application of machine learning in healthcare.December 2023 - January 2024

Fish & Meat Hub

As a member of the Fish&Meat Hub development team, I used C# for backend development and MySQL for database management. I designed core features, optimized performance, and ensured data security. This experience improved my software development skills and provided insights into e-commerce and web app development.March 2020 - April 2020
